These constitute the many and varied challenges for public administration in the dawn of the 21st century. Further these have global as well as national dimensions. Tasks before the Administrators in the 21st Century Stark poverty and social disharmony and conflict are not going to disappear just because a new century or a new millennium has begun. Humankind is aware of this truth. In imperial China and British India the mission was to defend and sustain the concerned empires. In postcolonial times, in the successor states concerned, the mission was to maintain law and order and social harmony to create and preserve the contexts in which steady, meaningful and sustained socio-economic development could take place.
