Charles Stewart Parnell (1846-1891), an Irish Protestant landlord, was one of the most significant Irish Nationalist political leaders of the nineteenth century. He was first elected to the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in 1875, as MP for the Home Rule Party lead by Isaac Butt. Parnell was also elected as president to Michael Davitt’s Irish National Land League in 1879, and became an avid campaigner for land reform in Ireland. The book also contains interesting appendices, including a letter from Parnell’s friend Joseph McCarroll to John Howard Parnell on the writing of this memoir, and the Manifesto of 1890 which Parnell issued to the Irish people.
