On June 16, 2009, the United States House of Representatives passed a bill requiring the Army to buy new, different uniforms for the War in Afghanistan, with camouflage pattern that would better suit the Afghan environment.[2] From 2010 onward, U.S. Army units deployed in Afghanistan were issued uniforms with MultiCam pattern. In 2015, the U.S. Army announced it will fully adopt the Scorpion W2 camouflage pattern (which is very similar to MultiCam) as the main camouflage for its units. UCP will be completely phased out with U.S. Army units by 2019. The uniforms of the United States Army distinguish soldiers from other service members. U.S. Army uniform designs have historically been influenced by British and French military traditions, as well as contemporary U.S. civilian fashion trends. The two primary uniforms of the modern U.S. Army are the Army Combat Uniform, used in operational environments, and the Army Green Service Uniform worn during everyday professional wear and during formal and ceremonial occasions that do not warrant the wear of ceremonial uniforms.
